

Tipping Point Grant Program

How it Works

A tipping point is the point at which a series of small changes becomes significant enough to cause a larger, more important change. The Tipping Points Program provides small grants to help “tip” people towards financial self-sufficiency. The program was created in 2016 by Partners for Community Wellness, a network of people who partner with Dartmouth-Hitchcock to improve health and wellness in their communities. Partners make small donations that are matched by institutional contributions to create a pool of funds. Participating social service agencies identify individual grant recipients, administer the funds, and provide support to advance them towards their tipping point.
